Anything to be concerned about? I just watched an ABC segment saying that Harris is underperforming in historically strong blue counties in Florida.

I watched a video earlier by a YouTuber saying Florida could be in play, but the ABC segment just crushed that possibility.

Brit here watching on BBC News in UK. It's mad to me how exit polls are reported while people are still voting.

I know our elections are very different, not least of all in terms of scale, but ALL media are strictly forbidden to even speculate on the outcome while polls are open on election day here.

For those of you that are new here:

Smaller counties in smaller states generally go red, no matter how the election goes this is important because of early red lead.

Statistics matter and calling a state is based on that. For example now 744pm est like 15k votes are counted in vt yet it has been called. Vs hundreds of thousands in other states without a call.

By 10pm or midnight tonight unless it's very close there should be one state that helps tip the scales and we all should know a lot more.

I really wish they gave the numbers that correspond with similar percentages reporting. I know it's not a true 1 to 1, but I hate that we only have 14% reporting yet you're comparing to percentages when the full vote is in.

Some metro Atlanta polling stations are staying open past 7pm.

These are the locations:

Cobb County

- Mount Paran Church of God: 1700 Allgood Road NE, Marietta, GA 30062
- Kell High School: 4770 Lee Waters Road, Marietta, GA 30066

Equipment problems caused these two polling locations to open late, according to Cobb County officials. They will remain open until 7:20 p.m.

Fulton County

- Etris-Darnell Community Center: 5285 Lakeside Dr, Union City, GA 30291
- C.H. Gullatt Elementary School: 6110 Dodson Rd, Union City, GA 30291

Both of these polling locations were temporarily closed after a series of "non-credible" bomb threats, Fulton County officials said. The county has applied for a 30-minute extension, which would close the polls at 7:30 p.m.

Gwinnett County

- Mountain Park Aquatic Center & Activity Building: 1063 Rockbridge Rd SW, Stone Mountain, GA 30087

This polling location was also the target of a bomb threat, according to police. Officers evacuated the building and performed a security sweep, finding nothing. The county will file an hour-long extension request, meaning the location would close at 8 p.m

I know I'm preaching to the choir but man would it be nice to just have coverage be "let's just count all the votes everywhere and then we will use the total to decide the result" but nope we have to zoom in on the map to one fucking street to see which house voted red and blue which determines the fate of everything for everyone

Everyone, calm down. It is SO early and it is ALWAYS like this in the beginning. It's known as the "red mirage". It happens everytime bc smaller towns tend to vote more red and bc they are small, their numbers come in first.

Deep breaths, kids. In through the nose for a slow count of five; hold at the top for a slow count of six; out through the mouth for a slow count of seven. Repeat as needed.

Osceola County in Florida has a huge Hispanic and Puerto Rican population. Biden won it by 14% in 2020. Trump is winning it at the moment by less than one percent.

I hope this isn't an omen that Hispanic voters didn't care that much about the garbage joke at Madison Square Garden.

therefore, count first and then report in. That causes the red mirage, because it shows a number that's disproportionally weighted to the Republican.

But - and this is critical and why you all need to pop a Xanny or something - the massive, blue cities report in later when the counts are completed there.

So here's your trick. If you see a vote proportion that you don't like, look at the critical "X% REPORTING". If it's below 50%, the state is nowhere near done counting and cities likely are nowhere near reported. If it's over 50% and above, that's where you need to start to watch it closely. Even a 90% reported state can flip if the vote tallies are close enough.

TLDR: Relax and stop acting like the sky is falling, Henny Penny.

of exceptions. Harris is behind right now...and then NY will finish counting and suddenly she'll leap ahead, a few smaller states will finish and Trump will go back etc. etc. Happens all the time since like...FDR?

2: Florida was never really in play and this is specifically by design by the GOP; not only do they have a true believer in DeSantis but he has actively been trying to make the state a worse place in order to drive out anyone more liberal/progressive than a Confederate General. If it wasn't for all the tourist trap places setting up shop way back when, FL would probably be one of the poorest, most abandoned states in the US and they know it.

3: Everyone thought Biden was losing too; until he suddenly wasn't. Calm down.

EDIT: Point 4: This was always very likely to be a close election with a good chance of Trump legitimately winning, even if myself and others think he won't. When it's a razor's edge like this, little things going wrong (or right) can tip the balance, so best laid plans and all. Though I would not be surprised if we see something nuts like TX electing Trump President but then also electing Allred for Senate dumping Cruz (because everyone hates Cruz even in the GOP) so it could be a interesting night.

Excited for republicans to complain about a late stunner in Georgia when Fulton and DeKalb come in: “where did all the late votes come from?! Rigged”

Your candidate and Elon got their pal Putin to call in bomb threats to democratic hubs all day. Sorry for the delay ya losers

ABC made a good point that a lot of republicans voted against Trump in the primary even when there was no other opponent and most wrote in Nikki Haley in these battle ground states. Super curious how that affects the forecasts

Republicans will be in the lead for a while, by a lot. That's how the electoral college works. Small rural towns vote Republican so their results are in first. There will be a drastic blue addition once the bigger cities catch up. Just like in 2020, Trump will use this as a "gotcha" to claim it's rigged. To all gullible republicans, please don't be stupid and use that to think it was rigged if Kamala wins. Use logic.

Some of Fulton's early vote in - Harris down ~1.5% from Biden's numbers. A slight slip is manageable if turnout is up by enough to cover for that, but I'm optimistic that day of vote will be slightly better for Harris. .

Reminder every year—more of one color doesn't mean more votes lol. Many states are nearly all red except their capital city's surrounding counties, and those few counties can flip an entire state. Its population and their votes that matter, not geographical area lol. Many red counties are rural and have like 1000 people living there.

Georgia is make or break on Atlanta and the surrounding area, for example.
